ILLUSTRATIVE SAMPLE — NOT AN ACTUAL CLIENT AUDIT

Private 60-Minute Business Audit

Prepared for: Jordan Avery · Jordan Avery Coaching (sample business, used for illustration only)

1. Current Business Position

Jordan runs a 1:1 executive coaching practice, averaging $4,200/month from a mix of referrals and inconsistent social content. Pricing sits at $800/engagement with no tiered structure, and roughly 60% of sales conversations end with "let me think about it." This is a realistic, but fictional, starting point used to show the structure of your real audit.

2. Offer & Positioning Assessment

- The offer is described by outcome ("better leadership") rather than mechanism, which makes it hard for a buyer to distinguish from a dozen other coaches.
- Pricing is below the ceiling the market will bear for this specialty; there is no entry offer to lower the first-purchase risk.
- Positioning currently competes on availability and friendliness rather than a specific, provable result.

3. Ideal Customer Analysis

The highest-converting past clients share one trait: a recent title change (new VP or Director) inside a 50–500 person company, not "anyone wanting to grow as a leader." Narrowing outreach and messaging to this buyer, instead of leadership in general, is the single highest-leverage change available right now.

4. Biggest Bottleneck

Offer clarity, not lead volume. Jordan already has enough conversations; too few convert because the offer does not name a specific before/after. Fixing acquisition before fixing the offer would only produce more "let me think about it" conversations at a larger scale.

5. Recommended Changes

- Rename the core offer around the specific transition (new leadership role, first 90 days) rather than "coaching."
- Introduce a lower-priced diagnostic session as the first purchase, mirroring the audit model itself.
- Move outreach from general social posting to direct conversations with people who recently changed title.

6. Priority Action Plan (First 30 Days)

Week	Focus	Outcome
1	Rewrite the core offer and one-line positioning	A message a stranger understands in one read

2	Build the lower-priced diagnostic entry offer	A lower-risk first purchase for new buyers
3–4	Direct outreach to 20 recently-promoted leaders/week	A repeatable, trackable lead source

Your real audit includes this same structure, built from your actual business, plus a full 100-day roadmap, AI implementation prompts for ChatGPT and Claude, and the business growth calculators referenced on the audit page.

This is an illustrative sample built to show the format and depth of a real audit. It uses a fictional business and is not the record of any actual client. It makes no guarantee of income or results; individual outcomes depend on your own offer, market and effort. © The5th Global Consulting.
